

Harvey Young

Executive Leadership Consultant and Speaker

Topics

Productivity

Extensive leadership experience coupled with energy and humor makes Harvey a popular speaker for a broad range of organizations.

Harvey Young believes that the parts of leadership and personal development that run deep—those not immediately obvious—are often the most important. He is committed to developing leaders who will become stewards of an organization's precious resources—especially its people.

Before his work with FranklinCovey, Harvey enjoyed a career in finance and management. During his 30 years as a business executive, he served as Chief Operating Officer for the City of Pittsburgh Housing Authority, Vice President of Secondary Marketing for Howard Hanna Financial Services, and President of West Penn Financial Services. He also worked in Philadelphia as a Senior Marketing Representative for Fannie Mae.

Harvey also founded and built MortgageXpress Financial Services, a mortgage banking company, to $1 billion in sales and $3 million in revenues as well as developed a mobile productivity application for BlackBerry users.

Harvey has worked with a variety of clients, including Fortune 500 organizations that represent manufacturing, real estate, finance, education, and banking. In addition, Harvey enjoys working with nonprofit organizations and government agencies at the local and federal level.
